AND IT CAME TO PASS

It was a Monday in October. Twenty-four hours earlier, the Giants had scored 35 points against the Cardinals, and yet had been beaten, by the fair margin of 28. The New York club appeared to be in a state of indecision.

"That game yesterday is what I have been waiting for," said Steve Owen, coach of the Giants, with his first exuberance since the 27-7 success in Boston.

"This is a young team, as pro clubs go, and one of these days it will click in a startling way. Don't sell us down the river."

The football writers, at whose weekly luncheon these remarks were made, gave Owen the customary respectful hearing, but did not seem to be too greatly impressed with the tone of prophecy.

Last Sunday, in Milwaukee, Owen's prediction finally came true. The Giants, with Chuckin' Charlie Conerly putting on the greatest one-man exhibition of the football season, defeated the Green Bay Packers by 49 to 3. The pollsters had given the game to the Packers by two touchdowns.

The demonstration in Milwaukee was not just a Conerly carnival. It was a brilliant performance by the entire squad. After Ted Fritsch had kicked his field goal in the first quarter, the Green Bay outfit was not in the game.

The trouncing was the worst in Packer history—far more thorough than the 44-28 setback by the Bears in 1942, the previous "worst" on the Green Bay books.

In so far as New York success against the Packers was concerned, the 24-0 score of 1944 had held the high place.

ONE MORE AT HOME

The home season of the Giants will come to a close on Sunday, December 12, at the Polo Grounds, with the Washington Redskins as the attraction. Kickoff at 2:05 P.M.

The Giants have a score to settle with Samuel Baugh & Co. On October 3, in Washington, the New York club was beaten by 41 to 10. The Giants have come a long way since.

STEVE OWEN

tional League, Willie Abbott, public relations liaison officer of the New York club, discovered that Owen's aroused battlers had matched the team high, set in 1941, with a 49-14 triumph over the Cleveland team.

The victory in Milwaukee boosted Owen as a prophet from another angle. At the opening of the season he said, "This reorganized club of ours will outdo the 1947 team."

Last year the Giants scored only two victories—35-31 against the Cardinals and 35-10 over the Redskins—on successive Sundays toward the close of the campaign.

This 1948 team beat Boston, 27-7, and Pittsburgh, 34-27, before the glorious adventure against the Packers.

Owen is not oblivious of his task even in the immediate wake of the victory in Milwaukee. His team still is a young one, bound to make mistakes. But — emphatically, — the Giants are pointed toward far more illustrious achievement in 1949.

Great as was the showing of the Giants, as a team, brilliant as was the work of Conerly, Joe Sulaitis, Bruce Gehrke, Bill Swiacki and others, the result against Green Bay was another personal triumph for Owen.

The Old Guard may get an occasional poke in the nose. But it never surrenders.

Choice of Experience!

A BOW TO JACK LAVELLE

This is a tribute, long delayed but none the less emphatic, to a large man by the name of Lavelle—Jack Lavelle, once of Notre Dame, rated one of the most able football analysts in the country. He has enjoyed this distinction for some years.

Lavelle is the scouting machinery of the Giants. In college football, he performs a similar service for his physical counterpart Herman Hickman, Yale coach.

For years Lavelle did a great scouting job on Army for Notre Dame. When Hickman left West Point for Old Eli, he induced Jack to go along with him, so highly did he respect the big fellow's ability.

Lavelle deserves a bow for the thorough dissection he performed on the Green Bay offensive before the Giants took the Packers apart at Milwaukee.

In so far as the fans are concerned, the scout of a football organization almost always is anonymous. The customers know the coach. Very often they become familiar with the names of the assistants. But the man who goes abroad each Sunday to watch coming opponents with an eager eye is the worker behind the scenes.

Of course, Steve Owen was quite familiar with Curly Lambeau's style of football before he began to prepare the Giants for the game with Green Bay. But always there are new things to watch out for, quirks and idiosyncrasies of individuals which give away a play, tip a defensive move. That's where the scouts—and that's where minds like Lavelle's—come in.

Scouting is not entirely a job of drawing diagrams. It is not merely doping the T or taking apart the single wingback formation of the opposition. There are vital human equations to solve.

Lavelle is a very interesting personality apart from his interesting functions behind the Giant scenes. He is a five-star raconteur. His services are very eagerly sought for after-dinner entertainment. His stories are funny. He is a witty Pickwick without rancor or animus.

JACK LAVELLE

In size, Lavelle compares very favorably with Steve Owen. Put Steve, Bill Owen, Red Smith, Jim Howell and Lavelle into a conference, and it must be held out on the field. No board floor could risk the penalties.

What with so many offensive patterns, and the growing list of defensive stratagems, the task of the football diagnostician has become most complicated, and thoroughly essential.

What makes it all the tougher is the fact that so many coaches refuse to stick to one set style. It used to be balanced or unbalanced line. Later, wing back, single or double. Then variations like the Owen A formation. After that, the ancient T, refurbished by Clark Shaughnessy and George Halas.

Now our pro clubs present a change of pace and patterns which are truly bewildering even to the expert onlooker, let alone to the man on the field.

Thus the Lavelles are so vital. And in the Giant family, there is no haler, no better met fellow than large Jack himself.

FOOTBALL and ROGERS PEET

Although the first professional football game was played 53 years ago in 1895 (when Rogers Peet had just come of age—21 years old that same Fall) . . . it wasn't until 1921 that the foundation of the National League gave the game the tremendous impetus that culminated 2 years ago in the formation of the All-America Conference.

With 18 major teams now playing in two leagues that pack the Polo Grounds, Yankee Stadium, and Ebbets Field here in Greater New York, and Fenway Park in Boston . . . and countless other good teams playing elsewhere . . . Professional Football has become, in a little more than a decade, one of the greatest of all sports.

We've seen a lot of good football! And so have Rogers Peet customers . . . attired correctly through all the style changes of 74 years, and comfortably from the first warm early-season openers to the last cold-weather climax games on the schedule.

GIANTS OF THE WEEK

Conerly and Gehrke Named Schaefer Award Winners in Packers Game; Scott and Poole Selected as Outstanding against Los Angeles

BRUCE GEHRKE

Chuckin' Charlie Conerly was named a Schaefer Award winner for the fourth time this season for his great performance against the Green Bay Packers last Sunday, when he completed 20 out of 30 passes for 306 yards and three touchdowns and ran for another tally.

Bruce Gehrke, showing his old Columbia form at end for the first time, was picked as the outstanding Giant lineman against the Packers. He caught one of Conerly's scoring pitches and played a bang-up game on the defense.

Against the Los Angeles Rams two weeks ago, Joe Scott and Ray Poole, both repeaters, were the selections. Scott had a tremendous day, scoring three times, once on a 99-yard kick-off return, and Poole, in addition to throwing Bob Waterfield for a safety, caught a touchdown pass.

The Schaefer Awards, established by the F. and M. Schaefer Brewing Company, go each week to the back and lineman, who in the opinion of experts, contribute the most valuable services to the Giants.

After every Giant contest—at home or away—leading sports writers are polled by secret ballot. The selections are announced each Tuesday at the weekly Giant press conference and the names of the winners are carried in this program the following Sunday.

Each Schaefer Award winner receives his choice of a list of articles of merchandise from a leading store. The prizes are suitably engraved and stamped with a special insignia.

CHARLIE CONERLY

In addition to the weekly awards, Schaefer Most Valuable Player prizes will be presented at the end of the season to the Giant back and lineman who have collected the most votes for outstanding play in the six HOME games at the Polo Grounds.

These season awards will be determined by the vote of the fans attending the Giant games. For your convenience, a ballot is attached. Fill out the blanks, follow the instructions and help your favorite Giant players win handsome prizes and trophies.

The complete list of Schaefer Award winners to date:

At Boston—Charlie Conerly, Len Younce.
At Washington—Conerly, Tex Coulter.
At Philadelphia—Ray Coates, Ray Poole.
Cardinals—Conerly, Jim White.
Steelers—Frank Reagan, Don Ettinger.
At Chicago Bears—Gene Roberts, Ettinger.
Philadelphia—Joe Scott, Paul Walker.
Los Angeles—Scott, Poole.
At Green Bay—Conerly, Bruce Gehrke.

THAT MAN IS ON HIS WAY

The one and only Sammy Baugh

Football's greatest one-man show—Sammy Baugh—will present his peerless act in the Polo Grounds two weeks from today—Sunday, December 12—when the Giants close their 1948 campaign against the Washington Redskins.

What a man is Baugh! He's been hitting the mark with those bulls-eye passes of his for twelve years now and it looks like he'll go on forever. At the ripe old athletic age of 34, Sammy's buggy-whip arm is cracking as sharply as ever and his X-ray eye still spots the open receiver with unfailing accuracy.

There never was a passer to equal Baugh and there probably never will be. Just a few weeks ago, old Sammy had one of the greatest days of his illustrious career. He hit with 17 of 24 tosses for four touchdowns and 446 yards—a National League record! He holds just about every passing mark in the book and is constantly revising them.

For a couple of years, Sammy had to go it pretty much alone. But now the Redskins are on the upsurge and he has plenty of help, which adds to his lethal effectiveness. This is a good Washington team. The Giants know how savage the Redskins can be. They were ambushed by a 41-10 count in Washington on October 3.

Dick Todd, Dick Poillon, Jim Castiglia, Dan Sandifer, Bob Nussbaumer, Eddie Saenz, Ed Quirk, Tom Farmer, Tommy Mont and Howie Livingston comprise one of the most talented arrays of backs in professional football.

Under the tutelage of Turk Edwards, than whom there have been few finer tackles, the young Redskin line has developed rapidly. It is big and tough and fast, with a real star in 241-pound John Sanchez, sophomore tackle from San Francisco, and a cracker-jack pass catcher in fleet Hal Crisler.

The rivalry between the Giants and the Redskins has written many a glowing chapter into the history of professional football. They have met regularly, twice a year, since 1937 and practically every game has been a thriller. The series score stands 13 to 10 in favor of the Giants, with one game tied.

With Steve Owen's young Giants improving with each start, another memorable contest is in store at the Polo Grounds on Dec. 12, when the Redskins and Sammy Baugh come war-dancing into town.

EMLEN TUNNELL

In a football game, attack gets the big call. The tendency in that direction becomes more and more pronounced. The fans want action, touchdowns and more touchdowns.

As a consequence, the customers watch the runner, the plunger, the passer and receiver, with the greatest attention and avidity.

It's about time more attention and credit went to defense, with emphasis on those who break up forward passes, and still greater stress on the interceptors.

That the Giants were able to do so thorough a job on the Green Bay attack last Sunday traced, in a large measure, to Steve Owen's pass killers.

In grabbing eight pitches intended for Packer receivers, the New York club came within one of the National League record set by Green Bay against Detroit, five years ago.

Never before had the New York club achieved as many as seven interceptions.

Steve's grabbers of enemy heaves at Milwaukee were Emlen Tunnell, from Iowa, who intercepted no fewer than three; Joe Scott and Frank Reagan, who snagged two apiece, and Jack Cannady, one. Scott, like Tunnell, is a yearling in the pro ranks.

Tunnell's interception demonstration produced one of the seven touchdowns under which the Polo Grounders buried the Packers in their worst defeat since they came into the National League in 1922.

It was in the second quarter, when it still was very much a contest, with New York leading by 7 to 3, thanks to Gene Roberts' catch of a Conerly pass, that Tunnell made his most spectacular interception.

The young man from Iowa by way of Garrett Hill, Pa. waylaid a pass thrown by Jack Jacobs and ran 43 yards for a score. Tunnell was injured in the first half, but came back after the recess, and picked up where he had left off.

Cannady's interception was a very damaging one for the Packers. In fact, it was one of the big breaks of the game. It stopped a Packer drive from the opening kickoff in the second half.

Yes, that was a great defense which the Giants threw up in Milwaukee. Great defense, and spectacular attack, both departments clicking together for the first time in a long while.

The Giants rolled up 28 first downs for 445 yards. Those first downs matched the National League record set by the Redskins, and, oddly enough, tied by the Philadelphia Eagles as well as New York, last week.

EAGLES CLOSE TO CLINCHING EASTERN TITLE; CARDINALS AND BEARS DEADLOCKED IN WEST

By defeating Washington, 42-21, last Sunday, Philadelphia virtually clinched the National League's Eastern Division title. Greasy Neale's high-flying Eagles, who have won seven straight, now hold a game-and-a-half lead over the Redskins, with three contests remaining for each. Philadelphia's record is 7-1-1, Washington's 6-3-0.

Meanwhile, the Bears and the Cardinals continue in their long-enduring deadlock for Western leadership. The Bears overwhelmed the Yanks, 51-17, while the Cards survived a close scrape with the dangerous Rams, 27-24. The Chicago entries each have won eight of nine games. Their December 12 meeting at Wrigley Field undoubtedly will decide the issue.

Their spectacular 49-3 triumph over the Packers moved the Giants into a third-place tie with Pittsburgh and put Steve Owen's club one victory up on its 1947 record. With the Yanks, the Steelers and the Redskins to meet, the Giants have a chance to take undisputed possession of third, at least.

The Cardinals and the Eagles are waging a close fight for offensive honors. The Cards have scored 301 points, the Eagles 300. The Bears stand third in the touchdown department, with 264 points. Defensively, the Eagles and the Bears are in a virtual deadlock, Philadelphia having yielded 98 points, the Chicago team an even 100. Pittsburgh, which has surrendered 167 points, is a distant third.

Three Ties Mark Series With Yanks

Ties and shutouts have marked the brief series between the Giants and the Boston Yanks. In the eight games played between the clubs since 1944, there have been three deadlocks and three whitewashing jobs.

The Giants hold the edge over their rivals from the Hub, having accounted for four victories to one by Boston.

There has been a tie in each of the last three years. In 1945, the count was 13-13; in 1946, it was 28-28 (Polo Grounds fans will remember this as one of top thrillers in Giant history) and, in 1947, it was 7-7.

Two shutout triumphs have been registered by New York, one by Boston. The Giants beat the Yanks, 31-0, in their second meeting of 1944 and trounced them, 17-0, in the Boston end of the 1946 series.

The Yanks handed the Giants a 14-0 trimming here last year.

In the two games in which the loser managed to score, the Giants were the winners, by 22-10 in 1944 and by 27-7 in the first 1948 clash between the clubs at Boston.

Last year, the Giants and the Yanks were parties to one of the biggest player deals in National League history. Boston sent Paul Governali to New York in exchange for Bill Paschal.

The series record:

1944—New York 22, Boston 10
New York 31, Boston 0
1945—New York 13, Boston 13
1946—New York 17, Boston 0
New York 28, Boston 28
1947—New York 7, Boston 7
Boston 14, New York 0
1948—New York 27, Boston 7
