GIANTS BACK TO A-FORMATION

TWO striking changes are Polo Grounds probabilities this afternoon. One is the return in force of the Giants to the A formation, a single wing offense invented by Steve Owen in 1937 and used to win league titles in '38, '39, '41, '44, and '46. The other is the appearance of Kyle Rote and/or Frank Gifford in the passer-runner role of A formation tailback.

This is the formation from which Ed Danowski passed so successfully back in the thirties. It helped Tuffy Leemans and Bill Paschal to three rushing championships. It is the formation from which Ward Cuff ran so fearlessly from wingback.

The Giants switched to the T in 1949 but the A was never wholly abandoned. It was Owen's baby and he inserted it into games unexpectedly from time to time to win some startling victories. This season the Swing T, a product of several years' work, was to have embraced both A and T setups.

Now it is back to the A for the Giants, not for surprise or effect but for bread and butter yardage. It is a change forced by circumstance.

Arnold Galiffa, Giant quarterback, will not play today. He may see no action again this season. He has a fracture of the transverse process of the spine, sustained last week against the Eagles.

The transverse process is a small bone jutting off the lower portion of the vertebrae. This injury is an old associate of the Giants who lost three players to it on three successive Sundays in 1951, Bill Stribling, Harmon Rowe and Travis Tidwell.

The loss of Galiffa puts the offensive burden squarely on Charley Conerly, with no other quarterback to relieve him. But Rote and Gifford, who could not fulfill the T quarterback role are more than adequate replacements as A formation tailbacks. Both were passing tailbacks in college. Both passed for touchdowns last year.

And of course both are runners, who, when fading to pass, can never be rushed too recklessly by enemy linemen. Gifford is, in addition, a quick kick threat.

Thus the return to the A will give the Giants maximum running effectiveness and better pass protection, all of which equals an improved attack. It will also utilize two great players, Gifford and Rote, to the maximum of their abilities.

So it's back to the A for the Giants. The A may not win any championships this season. But it will have much to say as to which contenders meet in the playoff game.

The Giants play Washington, Philadelphia, Cleveland and Detroit after today. None, particularly the red-hot Eagles and the Lions, who are tied with Los Angeles and San Francisco in the Western Conference can afford defeat.

ATTENTION FANS!

For the comfort and convenience of those attending Giant home games, it is requested that all ticket-holders take their seats by way of the entrance ramps leading to their own sections.

These entrance ramps are clearly marked. Using them will take you to your seat by the most direct route and with a minimum of confusion.

Give yourself—and the other fellow—a break and avoid walking in front of other sections while going to your seat.

This also applies in leaving the Polo Grounds before the end of a game. The quickest way out is by the nearest ramp.

FRANK GIFFORD . . . Gridiron ace.

FRANK GIFFORD . . . Actor. This is a scene from Universal-International's new picture, "All-American," in which the Giant halfback plays a leading role. At the moment, Frank is having a bit of trouble with cinema star Tony Curtis.

GIFFORD: Giant of Many Parts

THERE is little doubt today as to who is the most versatile Giant on the field. Players, coaches and most of the fans, too, say: Frank Gifford.

The former Southern California All-American is just 23 years old. He has been a Giant less than two seasons. But already he has established a reputation for dependability, durability and versatility unmatched in the National Football League.

Gifford runs, punts, passes, kicks extra points and field goals. He is extremely fast, a vicious tackler, a sure fingered pass catcher. In addition, he is so fine a defensive player that Coach Steve Owen rarely gives him opportunity anymore to display his offensive talents.

This afternoon you will see Gifford as one of the sturdy spokes of the Giant umbrella defense and as deep man when the Steelers punt or kick off. If the occasion presents itself, you might also see him on offense, where last year as a rookie he gained 116 yards rushing, completed one touch-down pass and caught five passes.

And Gifford is no slouch off the field. New Yorkers will see him soon starring in the movie "All American" with Tony Curtis and Herman Hickman. In the movie, Gifford plays fullback to Curtis' quarterback. He is somewhat of a villain and leading up to the finale Curtis knocks him into a swimming pool for his villainy.

Incidentally, Gifford, an accomplished college quarterback before he became a Giant halfback, taught Curtis all the actor knows about playing quarterback. The two spent long morning hours while the picture was being produced practicing ball handling, fading to pass, etc. Three quarters of Gifford's salary came for his acting and good looks. The other quarter was for instructing Curtis in the quarterback role. In the process the two became fast friends and Curtis taught Gifford some of the magic tricks he had learned for a prior role as Houdini.

On the football field Gifford is somewhat of a Houdini himself. He comes up from the secondary at dazzling speed to make tackles and interceptions or, at the last second, to bat down sure touchowns. If pro football were a one-platoon operation, Coach Owen is on record as saying that Gifford would be the most valuable back in the league.

The handsome halfback is 6 foot 1 and 195 pounds. He, his wife, Maxine, and their baby boy live in Los Angeles in the off season. Acting is only one of Frank's off-season activities. He is not thinking of the screen as a career but he is not entirely decided on what else he would like to do.

In the mean time he can do anything on a football field. And Giant fans are glad of it.

Meet the Giants

Frank Gifford

Frank Gifford (16), second-year Giant from Southern California, is perhaps the most versatile back on Steve Owen's squad. He performed brilliantly on offense as a rookie last year, was shifted to defense in an emergency and now is a mainstay of the umbrella secondary. He's a deadly tackler, a vigilant pass defender and a dazzling broken-field runner on punt returns and interceptions. He also has blossomed out as a field goal kicker.

Ray Krouse (70) has established himself as a solid and dependable tackle in three seasons with the Giants. The big fellow from Maryland—he weighs 250 pounds—is serviceable both ways but has been concentrating on defense this year. Amazingly agile for his size, he's a relentless crasher who keeps plowing in to raise ructions in the opposing backfield.

Ray Krouse

Dick Yelvington

Dick Yelvington (72) won his spurs with the Giants as a rookie last year and today rates as a key performer in Steve Owen's offensive line. The big blond 230-pounder from Georgia has an explosive charge and makes good use of his speed and weight as a blocker. When Rote, Price and Grandelius break away, you can bet that Dick has had a lot to do with spring them.

Bill Albright (75), 232-pound graduate of Wisconsin, has been a valuable member of the Giants for three seasons. Fast and rugged, he has been variously used as a running guard, middle guard on defense and a line-backer. Perhaps his biggest thrill as a Giant came in the first 1953 game with the Cardinals, when he pounced on a Chicago fumble and rushed the ball across for a touchdown.

Bill Albright

Bill Stribling

Bill Stribling (81) is carrying on an old tradition that the Giants must have at least one star end from Ole Miss. Now in his third season at the Polo Grounds, Bill has come into his own as a pass-grabber and is a favored target of Charley Conerly and Arnie Galiffa. Fast and sure-handed, he specializes in fielding long tosses and is a breakaway threat after getting the ball.

George Kennard (67) came out of Kansas as a rookie to make the grade with the Giants last year and currently is understudying Bill Austin at running guard. If Kennard were heavier, there would be no keeping him out of the line-up, for he is one of the fastest Giant linemen and hits as hard as anyone. But at 205 pounds, he lacks the straight ahead bulldozing power to play regularly up front in football's big league.

LOOKING OVER THE STEELERS

THE Giants have good reason to respect their opponents of today—the Pittsburgh Steelers. The Men of Steel have been the toughest foe for the Giants since World War II. Pittsburgh has beaten Steve Owen's squad eleven times in seventeen meetings since 1945, at the cost of a couple of divisional titles for the Polo Grounders. By way of adding insult to injury, the Steelers handed the Giants the worst defeat in their long history last season in a 63-7 debacle at Forbes Field last December. On top of that, they knocked off the Giants 24-14 in Pittsburgh a few weeks ago.

Pittsburgh, coached for the second season by Joe Bach, has a typically rugged and hard-hitting team, featuring a high-powered offensive backfield and a rib-cracking defensive line.

The Steeler backfield, rated one of the best in the league, is composed of Jim Finks (7), a sharp-shooting T-passes who threw twenty touchdown bullseyes in 1952; Ray Mathews (25), a feather-footed left half who can run like the wind; Lynn Chandnois (49), perhaps the most feared breakaway runner in the pro game, and Fran Rogel (33), a rip-roaring fullback who ranks among the league's top ground-gainers.

Three other valuable cogs in the Pittsburgh attack are Elbie Nickel (81), a pass-catching end who fakes with such consummate artistry that he is almost impossible to cover; Bill Walsh (56), the choice of the experts as the best blocking center in football's big league for the last couple of seasons, and Pat Brady (18), a prodigious left-footed punter.

Pittsburgh's defensive line, stingier in giving up yardage than any other forward wall in the circuit, arrays as follows from left to right: George Tarasovic (82), Lou Ferry (78), Dale Dodrill (60), Ernie Stautner (70) and George McPeak (84). These boys play for keeps, particularly McPeak.

On the rare occasions when the Steeler line is penetrated Dick Flanagan (57), Darrell Hogan (63) and Marv Matuszak (62), a trio of hard-tackling linebackers, are there to keep matters under control, which they do very well.

If Pittsburgh has a defensive weakness, it is in the back line, where Art DeCarlo (26), Tom Calvin (35) and Jack Butler (80) can be beaten by a well-thrown pass. Charley Conerly clicked with touchdown passes to Randy Clay and Buford Long against this trio at Pittsburgh in October.

The Giants hope that Conerly is on target today because Pittsburgh is mighty hard to dent on the ground. The Giant secondaries had better be alert, too. Chandnois, Mathews and Nickel, in particular, are dangerous from any point on the field.

REDSKINS HERE NEXT SUNDAY

EDDIE LeBARON

WAshington's colorful and dynamic Redskins come to the Polo Grounds to furnish the opposition for your Giants next Sunday. Steve Owen's boys have a score to settle with their old rivals from the nation's capital. The Redskins handed the Giants a 13-9 trimming in the first 1953 meeting of the teams at Washington.

No team in the National League has a more imposing collection of "name" backs than Washington. The Redskins' corps of ball-toters includes Jack Scarbath, Maryland's All-America quarterback of 1952; Eddie LeBaron, the flashy little magician from College of Pacific; mercurial Charley (Choo Choo) Justice from North Carolina; Leon (Mule Train) Heath, pile-driving fullback from Oklahoma; Harry Gilmer, pint-size triple threat from Alabama, and that great veteran, Bullet Bill Dudley.

Another important member of the Washington cast is Hugh Taylor. This pass-catching genius, a favored target of Sammy Baugh, is the toughest end to cover in the whole circuit, on the word of no less an authority than Super-Scout Jack Lavelle, who has seen them all. The records show that Taylor always gives the Giants a hard time.

Washington's explosive attack, which features long-range strikes on the ground and through the air, promises a busy afternoon for the Giants. New York-Washington games generally produce something out of the ordinary. These teams have battled it out so often for top honors in the league's Eastern division that their annual November clash at the Polo Grounds has come to be known as the pro loop's "Ivy League" game.

GIANT JOTTINGS

THE recent Armed Forces separation order which may permit Willie Mays to rejoin the baseball Giants for spring training may also permit Don Heinrich, leading collegiate passer of 1950 and '52, to join the Football Giants next August. The order states that an enlisted man who has a job waiting for him and can prove it, is eligible for discharge after having served 21 months of his 24-month hitch.

Heinrich, former University of Washington quarterback, was drafted at the conclusion of the 1952 football season. Thus, he might be available to the Giants for their August exhibition games in 1954.

After topping the NCAA passing statistics in 1950, injuries kept Heinrich out of the 1951 campaign. The Giants picked him in the player draft that winter. Heinrich justified the Giants' faith in him the following season by again leading all NCAA passers.

Arnie Weinmeister, himself a Washington alumnus, thinks Heinrich will become one of the pro game's greatest quarterbacks. Among other things, Don has the advantage of size. He stands 6 feet and weighs 190.

Another bright future Giant prospect is James Gray, East Texas State quarterback, who sets a collegiate passing record every time he makes a completion. At last count, Gray needed only a single touchdown pass to tie Babe Parilli's record for most touchdown passes in a college career.

Largely because of Gray's efforts, East Texas State was unbeaten up to last week's game. Gray, 6 feet 3 inches and 200 pounds, was chosen in the player draft by the Giants a year ago.

Today's clash between the Giants and Steelers will find two former Michigan State teammates on opposing sides of the line. Sonny Grandelius and Lynn Chandnois, both of whom have many boosters as the "best Spartan back ever," played together under Biggie Munn at East Lansing... Merwin Hodel, the new Giant fullback from Colorado, is a registered pharmacist and is planning to go into the pharmacy business in New York.

SCOUTING AROUND With Jack Lavelle

THIS is a specially good story because it really happened. . . . The Steelers were giving the Browns a whale of a battle at Cleveland last Sunday and, with the score 17-16 against them just before the end of the first half, called time out for a field goal try, square in front of the horns. . . . Bolkovac, who doesn't miss often, tried the kick. . . . He met ball squarely but before it ever got off his foot it was blocked.

The ball went dribbling off to the right, then all of a sudden it popped straight up into the air and hung there. . . . Renfro from way back in defensive halfback came racing along and picked it off. . . . He's a 9.5-second sprinter and the Steelers couldn't even throw sand at him. . . . So he went 79 yards to a touchdown and the score was 24-17 Cleveland instead of 19-17 Pittsburgh.

It's an overworked gag to cite the funny bounces that a football can take but I've never seen a weirder one. . . . That was enough to break your heart and the Steelers, who had been giving better than they were taking up to that point, never did get back into the contest.

You can't sell this team of Joe Bach's short, though. . . . In my book Chandnois is about the most dangerous back in the league. . . . He's a superlative football player —a real strong character for them in the offensive sense. . . . Mathews is another guy you have to watch every minute, too. . . . Then there's Nickel, who fakes, catches and runs with the ball better than any right end in the loop except maybe Lavelli. . . . And don't forget my left-footed Irish compadre, Brady. . . . He just about punts that ball out of sight.

I wish I honestly could say that I thought someone was going to head off Cleveland. . . . It doesn't look like it now. . . . But I'm still willing to bet that the Browns won't go through undefeated. . . . If they get by the Forty-Niners today, I might even have to hedge on that. . . . And with a neat reverse of my field, I'm going to pick them to beat San Francisco.

(Super-Scout Jack Lavelle files his confidential report in this space every week.)

TODAY'S SELECTIONS: Philadelphia over Baltimore; Washington over Bears; Detroit over Green Bay; Los Angeles over Cards; Cleveland over San Francisco.
