Giants Stress Coaching Staffwork

JIM LEE HOWELL and his staff are entitled to take deep bows for the well-rounded performance of the Giants in last Sunday's home opener against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

This 1956 Giant squad is the best balanced Giant team in years—and it didn't get that way by luck or accident.

The slick all-around job the Giants turned in against the Steelers, and have been turning in Sunday after Sunday, represents the culmination of three years of painstaking effort by Howell and his aides: Vince Lombardi, Ed Kolman, Ken Kavanagh and Tom Landry.

There was much work to be done when Howell took command of the Giants at the start of the 1954 campaign. The team obviously needed a top-to-bottom overhauling.

Personnel had begun to wear thin in several key spots. The offense had not consistently kept pace with pro football's accelerated attacking tempo. The defense needed shoring.

A straight-thinking, straight-talking, hard-nosed football man, Howell quickly sized up the Giant deficiencies and did something about them.

It takes only a quick glance at the Giant roster to appreciate the personnel changes that have been made at Jim Lee's instigation. The 33-man Giant squad includes only ten players who antedate the Howell regime.

The attack has been completely restyled to a point where it is no exaggeration to say that the Giant offense is the most varied and advanced in pro football. Defensive variations have been added that impose an added burden on the opposition.

These sweeping changes came about by the correlated effort of a young, aggressive coaching staff that works together like a well-oiled machine.

Pooh-poohing his own part in the obvious all-around Giant improvement, Howell modestly declares, "The staff does the work. I just keep peace."

An organizational genius in his quiet way, Jim Lee has assigned each of his aides a definite area of responsibility and stands firmly behind their decisions.

Here's how the coaching chores are divided: Lombardi, backfield coach, has charge of the offense and selects the play sequences that are to be emphasized in any given game. Kavanagh, end coach, sets the pass patterns. Kolman, line coach, directs the special units used for punting, place-kicking and kick-offs. Landry, defensive coach, designs the defense to be used.

Considering the effectiveness the Giants have showed in running and passing, in stopping enemy runs and passes and in punting and place-kicking, the Howell staff system is a smashing success.

An "Old Pro" But Young at Heart, That's the Giants' Em Tunnell

Few rookies ever faced as much pressure as did Tunnell, the first Negro to play for the Giants, in 1948. The story is told of some early season games that year when Tunnell caught a punt and was immediately hurled to the ground by four of five beefy linemen.

"Signal for a fair catch next time," instructed one of the coaches. "You're not playing in college now. These players are big enough and fast enough to knock you into little pieces if you don't."

Obediently, Tunnell made a fair catch on the next punt. There was a smattering of booing from the stands. Tunnell looked up in surprise as he jogged to the bench. On the second fair catch the booing was more pronounced.

"If you want a fair catch on the next punt you better put in someone else," Tunnell grimly told the coaches. "I'm not making any more fair catches. The crowd thinks I'm afraid. I'll show them."

Twice on succeeding punts Tunnell was buried by tacklers. The third time he twisted loose and was off on a spectacular touchdown run that brought the crowd, roaring, to its feet.

That was the beginning of a great career for Em, who walked in off the street to get his job with the Giants after a couple of seasons at Iowa. Now in his ninth season, Tunnell is the all time NFL record holder for interceptions. He holds another record for most punts returned in a season, and he once made four touchdown runbacks in a season, tying a third mark. He has never missed selection to the Pro Bowl Game, one of the few stars so honored. In addition, he has played in 94 consecutive games, a total seldom approached by slender halfbacks.

Tunnell is an intelligent, reliable, but at the same time, a care-free young man who would rather be a football player than president. In the off season he travels for a beer company, which regards him as a valuable member of its sales force. With the money he has made from pro football, he has bought a home for his mother in Garrett Hill, Pa. He is single.

For years Tunnell has been the Giants' offense on defense. While some fans wondered why so talented a broken field runner was not given a chance in the offensive backfield, the Giants pointed out that year after year Tunnell gained as much or more ground from his defensive safety position as the League's best running backs.

One season Dan Towler won the ball carrying championship with 894 yards. Not a bad total—but Tunnell beat that with 924 gained running back punts, kickoffs and intercepted passes. In addition, more than one wounded halfback was moaning that the 183 pound Tunnell tackled harder than any man in football.

Tunnell, as much as any other player, has caused a pronounced change in one phase of the game. He became so deadly at running back punts that coaches experimented with various spread punt formations, and then selected the one most likely to stop Tunnell before he got started. Today, all clubs use a spread which throws half a dozen or more tacklers downfield under the punt.

Em's courage is unquestioned. Once he ran into a goal post while trying to intercept a pass. Knocked cold, he was helped to the bench. A few seconds later he was seen running back into the game. "The trainers and I were holding him at the sidelines," recalled Dr. Francis Sweeny, team physician. "But Em broke away from us and ran back onto the field."

Dr. Sweeny, after 25 years with the Giants, lists Tunnell as one of the half dozen gamiest Giants of all time, speaking of him in the same breath with Mel Hein, Ward Cuff and other legendary Giant heroes.

Em's getting into the legendary class himself but he's a legend who's still very much alive.

Meet the Giants

Charley Conerly

Charley Conerly (42), now in his ninth season with the Giants, is one of pro football's great clutch players. Going into the current season, the former Mississippi All-America had thrown 113 touchdown passes. He holds just about every Giant passing record and several league marks. Originally a single wing tailback, Chuck has developed into a slick T quarterback.

Mel Triplett (33) was late in reporting last year and saw limited service as a rookie. He's making up for lost time this season. He scored three touchdowns in each of the first two Giant games. A powerful, determined runner, he gives the Giants their heaviest inside punch in years. The 24-year-old Toledo graduate is married and has five children.

Mel Triplett

Bob Schnelker

Bob Schnelker (85), a Bowling Green alumnus, came to the Giants in 1954 after putting in a year with the Eagles. He was the New Yorkers' top pass-receiver in 1954 and ranked third on the team last season, grabbing a total of eleven touchdown tosses in these two campaigns. He is not extremely fast but has the knack of getting loose and seldom muffs a pass he can reach. Also does a solid job of blocking.

Jack Stroud (66), a four-year Giant, at last is getting long-deserved recognition for his blocking feats. The square-shouldered, deep-chested Tennessee graduate, as often as not, is the guy who springs Gifford, Webster or Triplett on their long dashes. Fast afoot, he shines at pulling out of the line and leading wide plays. Keep your eyes on his No. 66.

Jack Stroud

Herb Rich

Herb Rich (27) talked of calling it quits at the end of last season. But the lure of football proved too strong for this veteran of seven pro campaigns and, to the delight of the Giants, he decided to give it another whirl. Acquired from Los Angeles during the 1954 season, the 28-year-old Vanderbilt graduate is a deadly tackler and vigilant pass-defender at right safety.

Ray Beck (61), a Giant since 1952, with time out for years of Army service, probably is the most versatile Giant lineman. Jim Howell does not hesitate to use the big Georgia Tech graduate anywhere. As rookie, he was a regular offensive guard. Since his return from service, he has settled down at middle defensive guard and is rated one of the best. Despite his 225 pounds, he's as fast and nifty as a halfback.

Looking Over the Eagles

TOM SCOTT

The Eagles have a new coaching staff, headed by Hughey Devore, the old Notre Damer, and a lot of new players. But the basic character of the team hasn't changed much. Philadelphia still features passing on the attack and rib-crushing line play on defense.

In Bobby Thomason (11) and Adrian Burk (10), the Eagles have two "old pro" quarterbacks who still can throw with the best. For the past six years, these fellows have been taking turns in the handback slot with lethal effect. If one isn't "hot," the other usually is. This seems to be Thomason's year. He has been doing most of the work. However, Burk stands in constant readiness to relieve and meanwhile supplies the Eagles with the best punting in the NFL.

The veteran Bobby Walston (83) tops a gifted receiving corps that includes the fleet and elusive Skippy Giancanelli (27) and John Bredice (89), a rookie from Boston U.

New boys supply running punch that the Eagles lacked last year. Don Schaefer (24), Notre Dame's 1955 All-America fullback, and Ken Keller (23), a shifty lad from North Carolina, both have cracked the starting line-up.

The defensive unit is led by those destructive ends, Norm (Wild Man) Willey (86) and Tom Scott (82). They have a contest on every play, to see who can hit the other team's passer first and hardest. Then, there are those devastating line-backers, Chuck Bednarik (60), a perennial all-league selection, and Wayne Robinson (52).

It's hard to know what's going to develop in any NFL game but the Eagles have what it takes to make a contest against any foe.

LAMAR McHAN

The Chicago Cardinals, surprise team of the NFL to date on the strength of victories over the Browns, Giants and Redskins in their first three games, will be the next visitor to Yankee Stadium. They fly in to town to meet the Giants two weeks hence.

With them they will bring possibly the fastest group of backs in all of football. Heading their contingents of speedboys is big Ollie Matson. The 1952 Olympic sprinter was the NFL's top ground-gainer at last look.

Matson's supporting cast includes Alex Burl, a rookie from Colorado A. and M., who has run the 100 in 9.4 seconds, and Frank Bernardi, another whirlwind first-year runner from Colorado.

The Cardinals have power as well as speed, with Johnny Olzewski and Joe Childress, the 1955 All-America from Auburn, at fullback. Also, their passing game is much improved. Lamar McHan, a single wing tailback at Arkansas, at last having mastered the intricacies of T-formation.

Among the other stars of the Chicago Southsiders are Don Stonesifer, a time-tested pass-receiver, and Dick (Night Train) Lane, a crack pass defender.

There wasn't a dull moment in the 35-27 Chicago game between the Cardinals and Giants. The outlook is for another wild and woolly thriller here two weeks hence.

Giant Jottings

Charley Conerly bagged two trophies for his brilliant efforts in last Sunday's 38-10 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers. Chucking Charley received the Jewish Consumptive Relief Society Trophy as the game's outstanding performer and also carried off the weekly Longines award as the top Giant on offense. . . . Sam Huff, the rookie middle guard from West Virginia, won the Longines defensive award.

Gene Filipski's spectacular debut as an offensive halfback against the Steelers pleased the Giants no end because Jack Mara went to all kinds of trouble to track down the former Army and Villanova star after his release by the Cleveland Browns. The Giant proxy finally collared Gene in San Francisco after missing connections with him in Cleveland, Philadelphia and Calgary, Ont. Off what he showed against Pittsburgh, Filipski will get plenty of work as a relief for Frank Gifford and Alex Webster.

The Irvington, N. J., High School band will provide pre-game and between-halves entertainment today. This well-drilled marching and playing unit, which is directed by Marlo Brinser, has played at Giant games before and never has failed to make a big hit. . . . Incidentally, that was a cute touch by the Hempstead High School band last Sunday in making a prominent display of umbrellas in their "spectaculars." The Long Islanders were rained out twice in scheduled appearances before Giant crowds last year.

Attention, automobile drivers: In addition to the numerous parking lots in the immediate vicinity of Yankee Stadium, the Polo Grounds lots will be in operation for all Giant home games. It's only a short walk from the Polo Grounds to the Stadium, or a one-stop ride on the IND Sixth Avenue subway's D train.

Have you ever seen two halfbacks who run lower or cut quicker than the Giants' Frank Gifford and Alex Webster? . . . Football technicians admire the Giants' skillful execution of the "ride" series (call it the "belly" or "drive" series, if you prefer). This sequence is built around a prolonged quarterback fake to the fullback. Sometimes the fullback keeps the ball, sometimes the quarterback plucks it back out of the fullback's middle and delivers it to a trailing halfback and sometimes, after faking delivery to a halfback, the quarterback will drop back to pass as Conerly did twice for touchdowns last Sunday. It's all very confusing to the opposition.

Scouting Around . . . with Jack Lavelle

HAVE you run across the football term "slot T" yet? Well, if you haven't, you probably will soon, because it's making the rounds pretty good in the Mid-western provinces. So, to add to the confusion, I'll attempt to tell you what it's all about. "Slot T" is nothing more than a new name for an old T formation variation. It involves sending an end out as a flanker and placing a halfback inside of him, in the "slot." Normal procedure in setting flankers is to have the halfback outside the end.

The Chicago Bears have been using the "slot T" for years and this season the Steelers, Eagles and Packers have taken it up. It's a good passing formation for teams that have a spare fast end. You may have noticed that the Steelers used Elbie Nickel, normally an end, as their "slot" halfback last Sunday. Check the Eagles today and you'll probably see John Bredice, Philadelphia's good rookie end, there a lot of the time, too.

A lot of people have been asking such questions about the Cardinals as "Are they really that good?" and "Will they stay up there?" The answers are "Yes" and "Maybe." I have to hedge on the second question because in this league anything can happen and usually does. But I will say this: it's no accident the Cardinals are up there and it's not going to be easy to knock them down. That big Ollie Matson kills you and Lamar McHan has come along to give them a passing threat to support their running game.

The Cardinals have three good new backs in Alex Burl, Frank Bernardi and Joe Childress. Johnny Olszewski has had to play better than ever before to keep Childress out of the starting line-up. They also have an unsung hero in Gern Nagler. He hasn't cracked the headlines much but, in my book, he's one of the real good ends in the league. Don't kid yourself. The Cards have a lot of talent and, what's more, they believe in themselves.

For what they're worth, here are some random observations about the league in general: For the fifth or sixth year in a row, there's better balance than ever before. There's no such thing as a patsy any more. . . . The Packers, as far as they can go, are as good as any team in the league. . . . Perry Jeter of the Bears is a rookie back who's going to go far in this game. . . . Cleveland's Lou Groza was a better place-kicker when he had Otto Graham to spot the ball for him. . . . Buddy Parker really has the Lions fired up this season. If there ever was "a team called desire" Detroit is it.

TODAY'S SELECTIONS—I called five out of five last week (you'll pardon the typographical errors on the Eagles-Cardinals and Redskins-Browns games; the printer couldn't read my handwriting). So here we go again. . . . Redskins over Cardinals (and after that big build-up for the Cardinals, too); Steelers over Browns; Lions over Rams; Bears over Forty-Niners and Packers over Colts.

Super-Scout Jack Lavelle files his confidential report in this space each week.
