POOR OLD CHARLEY

By JACK SELL
Post-Gazette Football Writer

Today may mark the final local appearance of one of pro football's great forward passers when Chuckin' Charley Conerly of the New York Giants hurls the pigskin against the Pittsburgh Steelers in Pitt Stadium.

The University of Mississippi graduate was 37 years old last September 19 and has been going to the pro football wars for eleven seasons. He has to quit sometime and this just might be his last time around.

Conerly had the misfortune to get off on the wrong foot in the Maramen's home opener in Yankee Stadium. He missed the mark with numerous flings, had others intercepted. As a result the Chicago Cardinals copped a 23-6 decision. Earlier in Buffalo the New Yorkers had shuffled the Cards, 37-7.

In Big Town you must win or else. "Poor old Charley" was over the hill, the sports pages screamed. The Steelers were shocked to hear the veteran booed the next Sunday when Rooney U. visited the Stadium.

Coach Jim Lee Howell listened to the razzberries and decided to keep his star on the bench except for holding the ball on placements. Don Heinrich did all the passing and won, 17-6.

But the Chucker wasn't done. The Giants traveled to Cleveland for a battle with the unbeaten Browns. When the final gun barked the Gothamites had won, 21-17, with Conerly pitching for three TDs.

Last Sunday he found the range for another six-pointer when the Baltimore Colts were handed their first loss, 24-21. So "Poor old Charley" isn't acting his age.

Back in 1948 at Forbes Field Conerly set an NFL record of 36 completions in a single game. It withstood the threats of some great passers now for 10 years.

Curiously Charley was drafted by the Washington Redskins then traded to the Giants. He was Rookie-of-Year as a singlewing tailback in 1948, then switched to the T in 1949.

If Rooney U. wants to stick in the NFL race they will have to handle "Poor old Charley" this afternoon.

QUESTION:

What was your reaction when you were told that you had been traded?

ANSWER: Tom Tracy —

"Well, frankly, I wasn't too happy. Detroit is a fine football town and I thought the Lions' chances of taking the league again were excellent. But I'm happy as can be now in Pittsburgh. I'm playing more than I would have in Detroit and this team isn't far from the top. The people have been very nice to me and I think with a couple of wins, we'll draw pretty well."

QUESTION:

Who was the finest punter you ever saw?

ANSWER: Dale Dodrill —

"Horace Gillom of the Browns was the best I ever played against but the best I ever saw was Pat Brady who played a couple of seasons with us. Watching him kick was like watching a baseball batter with a perfect swing. I remember one time while practicing at Forbes Field he got one off that must have gone eighty yards in the air. There was a strong wind behind Pat and the ball actually sailed out of the park. He was one guy that other pro players would just stand back and watch in amazement."

QUESTION:

What do you consider the most important asset of a runner?

ANSWER: Ollie Matson of the Chicago Cards —

"I guess the most obvious answer would be speed but I'm inclined to feel that a change of pace is at least as important. In this league you find on any defensive team a couple of guys who are pretty fast. The change of pace is the thing that will spring a runner or give him the extra steps he needs to pull away."

Simonin, works manager of the Allegheny (Pa.) Works of Pittsburgh Steel Co. Five gridders toured the plant with Simonin.

Pittsburgh Steelers at Pittsburgh Steel

There's a source of mutual pride in two Pittsburgh teams with similar names—the hard-hitting Pittsburgh Steelers and the steelmaking team of Pittsburgh Steel Co.

Both teams take pride in their work. Both are working hard to beat records. In the steelmaking mills and on the gridiron, these two teams can be counted on for a championship try.

During their pre-season training sessions at nearby California, Pa., five Steelers took time out to tour the Allegheny (Pa.) Works of Pittsburgh Steel Co. On this visit Tackles Ernie Stautner and Frank Varrichione, Linebacker Ralph Felton, Quarterback Len Dawson and End Ed Bernet saw something of the activity which gave their team its name—steelmaking.

THIRTY-ONE YEARS YOUNG

While waiting for his wife to arrive at Willow Run airport in Detroit last month, Bobby Layne was informed over the loudspeaker that a call was waiting for him. Over the phone the husky blond received word that he was the property of the Pittsburgh Steelers. Before leaving the airport Layne had reservations for his wife and himself on a flight to Pittsburgh that same evening.

Riding out to the South Park practice field the following morning with defensive halfback Richie McCabe, Layne lost no time in asserting himself as a man with a purpose. As he shook hands with his new team-mates Layne began asking pointed questions. "Who're our best long receivers?" "Who's done most of the ball carrying?" "How's Tracy working out?" Before the practice at the South Park field was completed the rest of the Steelers were aware that their new field general, a ten year veteran, had the mental attitude of a rookie.

Layne's ten years in the National Football League have been stormy and filled with ups and downs. Drafted originally by the Steelers in 1948 the Lubbock, Texas, native was traded to the Chicago Bears when he refused to play in the single wing. At Chicago Layne collected splinters watching Sid Luckman and Johnny Lujack direct the talent-laden Bears. At the end of the '48 season Layne was traded to the New York Bulldogs. Bobby directed the Bulldogs to a rather inglorious record that included one win and one tie. In a series of player and franchise switches in 1950 Layne wound up in Detroit where he was to achieve true stardom under Buddy Parker. Just missing the league title in 1951, the Lions came back in 1952 to grab the world championship. Three times in the following five years Layne led Detroit to division championships. Last year in an early December game with the Browns, Layne suffered a broken leg and a dislocated ankle. Word went out that the veteran quarterback was considering quitting the game and even if he didn't quit he would never regain his old form. Fortunately for the Steelers neither of these predictions came true.

Layne's name can be found in most NFL passing records right behind Sammy Baugh. As cool a performer as pro ball has ever seen, Layne spots his receiver, then delays until the last moment before letting fly. He possesses unerring accuracy on passes up to fifty and sixty yards. Layne's short passes are of the bullet variety that are most difficult to intercept. Bobby's ball-handling is above average, at least. His fakes are deceptive and his hand-offs and pitch-outs are sure. As icing on the cake the husky blond has always shown an eagerness and an ability to run with the ball. Hardly the fastest man on the team, Layne jokes about his own running ability, but he's a difficult man to lay a hand on when he finds his receivers covered.

All of these tremendous assets would perhaps be wasted if Layne did not possess the one all-important essential of any great quarterback, leadership ability. Layne feels his duty is complete supervision of the offensive play of the team and acts accordingly. The player whose missed block foils a play will probably hear about it before the next play is called. One might expect his fellow team-mates to object to this. Most agree with the offensive tackle who said "He'd never ask anybody to do anything he wouldn't do himself. The guy has guts coming out all over him. The heaviest equipment he wears are his shoes because he doesn't want to be slowed down by extra weight. The morale of this team has improved 100% since he came here simply because some of his desire to win has rubbed off on the rest of us."

At thirty-one, the six-two, 208 lb. dynamo might be considered in the twilight of his career, but he has given no thought to retirement. Recently, in a hesitating Texas drawl, Layne made a statement that fell on anxious ears. "Ah wouldn't even think of quitting befo' we got a championship here in Pittsburgh, and even then ah'd probably stick around awhile because ah sorta' like to be on top". . . That's the only place a guy like Mr. Layne belongs.
